	EXTRA TIME.	HOURS.
At 11.20 o'clock last night, fire was discovered in the die annealers room, and reported to me by Watchman Henry Cole, I immediately went there, accompanied by as many men as we could spare from the door and found the die box, and a winocoting back of it burning. I immediately extinguished it with buckets of water, and then brought a line of hose from stand pipe, to be used in case it was needed. I then directed Engineer Capehart, to raise and hold all night sufficient steam for fire service. There was comparatively little smoke in the room when I entered, showing that the fire had not been long under way.
